PAY UP-AND PLAY THE GAME

SO far as employment is concerned Redcliff, at the present time, is now enjoying a season of prosperity.

Our three brick plants are working almost to capacity, and the glass plant is running night and day. In all of these plants prospects are good for a steady season's run and at the present time few men in town need be idle.

This is most encouraging, especially after the slack season last fall and winter. Added to there is the prospect of the rolling mill opening up for business in the near future, and the increased activities which must naturally accompany the oil development which is on the program for this vicinity in the not very distant future.

All things, being considered the outlook for the future is more encouraging now than it has been for some time.

This prompts the question: "Are we in a position to take advantage of these conditions to the fullest extent, and are we all doing our best to help each other to benefit by present conditions?"

Last fall and winter when times were slack, our merchants played an important part by extending a reasonable amount of credit to their customers. Now that times are better this service should not be overlooked. A special effort should be made by all to get squared up so that our merchants can do the same and be in a position to replenish their stocks and take advantage of these better times by providing their needs with a full line of goods.

"Pay up and play the game" is the slogan of many western papers and organizations at the present time, and if lived up to we know of no better way of helping to bring about that prosperity and contentment for which we have been looking so long.

A little system and co-operation in this pay up movement will work wonders. Call on your creditors; talk the matter over with them; make arrangements for a little payment each month; spend your cash with those who carried you over the dull times. Then everybody will be happy and we will soon all be on easy street again. Let's try it.

THE FOOTBALL TEAM

SUPPORTERS of the Redcliff football team are proud of the showing made by the team this season.

For several years past Redcliff has stayed in the league and, although labouring against great odds, they stuck to it even when they had no hope of winning any of the coveted trophies up for competition. For this perseverance they have won the praise and admiration of their competitors and we feel sure that there are none who rejoice more with them in their success this year, than the players in the teams against whom they have been playing in days gone by.

The winning of two cups already this season shows what can be accomplished by perseverance. It also shows what co-operation, practice and enthusiasm can do.

The season is not yet over. There are still more fields to conquer, and the same spirit which has brought them distinction so far will bring them more.

The players and the executive have done well and are deserving of the support and encouragement of our citizens.

In the death of William Jennings Bryan there has passed out what was, without a doubt, a notable character, not so much in what he accomplished as in the part he played on the stage in the limelight of the United States and, it may be said, of the world. To call the dead man a "Great Commoner" or even a statesman, would be a misnomer. If fervid and brilliant, unduly gives a "man" a claim to that title William Jennings Bryan had a full claim to it. But in that broader denomination of the term, as applied to such men as Abraham Lincoln, to name one of his own nation, and men of the name and fame of Pitt and Gladstone, William Jennings Bryan fell short of the distinction. Notwithstanding this, he was a man entitled to respect, for what ever his ideals and his opinions may have been, they had in them the hallmark of sincerity and earnestness which compels or at least entitles men to recognition.

The Vancouver Sun expresses the opinion that two things which will seriously cripple the western grain route are the "permit system," which is in force in regard to shipping grain to Vancouver, and the absence of a cash market in Vancouver. In doing this it is adding force to the grievances voiced by farmers in Alberta when it comes to shipping grain by the western instead of the eastern route.

The big Scopes' trial in Dayton, Tennessee, is over, at least for the time being, and, contrary to the prediction of apollinists on both sides, neither religion nor evolution has suffered any from the circus. People today are more interested in where they are going than in where they came from.

Champlain Memorial Marks Advent of White Race

On July 24, 1615, was a great day in the lives of the townsfolk of the little seaport of Montserrat in Northern France, for on that day, Sieur Samuel de Champlain, whose earlier voyages and discoveries in the New World had stirred the imagination of the French Court and of the merchants of the Norman and Breton seaports, set sail in the little ship, the St. Etienne, with a party of four Recollet brothers to Christianize the Indians. After a stormy voyage the little ship sailed up the St. Lawrence to that natural haven, now the city of Quebec. Later Champlain went on to Montreal, where he found a large band of Indians assembled to meet him, reminding him of his promise to assist them in their wars. Realizing that this would lead to exploration and eventually to colonization, he set off to Quebec to make arrangements, the Indians sending out their scouts. Before he returned from Quebec, the Indians growing impatient sent out with Father Le Caron and twelve Frenchmen into what is now the Province of Ontario. Champlain, with two Frenchmen and ten Indians started up the Ottawa to the Mattawa, and joined with the Hurons in a war expedition against the fierce Iroquois, by means of which Champlain, who was an enthusiastic explorer as a soldier, discovered Lake Ontario. Returning from the wars, Champlain spent Christmas, 1616, with his friend, Chief Daronat at Chaboungou, where now stands the town of Orillia on Lake Simcoe. The gallant gentleman returned to Montreal in June, 1616, where he found his friends, the Recollets, had given up hope of seeing him again. Champlain's work as an explorer was now done, but his voyage into Ontario opened the path to the west to the missionary and trader.

It is a far cry from the little ship, St. Etienne, which set sail that day so long ago from France, "up the St. Lawrence" to Quebec, to the giant Canadian Pacific steamship, "Montreal," which one hundred and ten years later sailed from Cherbourg by the same route to the Canadian Gibraltar. On board the "Montreal" was Vernon March, the famous English sculptor who designed and executed the monument recently erected at Orillia, to the memory of the gallant soldier, missionary and explorer, Sieur de Champlain, near the site of Chaboungou, from which little settlement, Champlain started out with his Indian friends on the disastrous expedition against the Iroquois and where he returned with his discouraged allies.

The bronzes for the monument are colossal in size, the figure of Champlain himself being twelve feet high, of astounding action and vigor. In addition to this main figure are two groups, one, "Christianity," representing a Recollet father holding aloft the Cross, fix to the savages (No. 1). The other is "Commerce," and shows the voyageur with a singular pair of Indian shoes, 80 feet square and 18 feet high, giving the monument a total height of 80 feet (No. 2).

Mr. Vernon March (No. 4), the sculptor, is an interesting figure. He is son of a family of seven brothers and one sister, all of whom are artists and sculptors. At their studio and workshop, in Farmborough, Kent, which formerly was an old post house, they do their own casting as well as designing. Mr. Vernon March's work, particularly that for war memorials, has won the highest recognition in all parts of the Empire and the memorial at Orillia is both conception and execution is one of the finest examples of his art. Mr. Sydney March, a younger brother, crossed on the "Montreal," and will assist his brother in the erection of the bronzes.

The late Lord Strathcona was one of the original promoters of the monument and made the initial contribution to the fund, while the Canadian Pacific Railway also contributed to the erection of the monument.

CAPTAIN BLOOD

RAFAEL SABATINI

Copyright, 1922, by Rafael Sabatini
CAPTAIN BLOOD, a Violent Story by J. Morris Kumpke
In the title race, to the adaptation of this thrilling work.

Within an hour the water-cats at least replenished and stowed aboard, the Arabella and the Elizabeth put to sea upon that sorry chase.

"What! Now, Peter?" cried the young Jeremy Pitt. "Lord, man, what is there here to fright you. Surely 'twasn't the thought of Bivaro!"

"No," said Blood quickly. And for once he was communicative. It may well be that he must vent the things that expressed him or be driven mad by it. And Pitt, after all, was his friend and loved him, and so, a proper man for confidences.

"But if I know," he said. "Oh God! I had thought to have done with piracy, thought to have done with it for ever. Yet here have I been committed by this squander to the worst piracy that ever I was guilty of. 'Tisn't of Caribbea? Think of the hell those devils will be making of it now! And I must have that on my soul!"

Selling a course for Hispaniola, since they judged that thither must Bivaro go to rest before attempting to cross to France, the Arabella and the Elizabeth ploughed briskly northward with a moderately favourable wind for two days and nights without ever catching a glimpse of their quarry. The third dawn brought with it a haze which obscured the whole range of vision to something between two and three miles, and deepened their growing uneasiness to a morbid apprehension that M. de Bivaro might escape them altogether.

They had Jamaica on their larboard beam some thirty miles to the westward, and indeed, away to the northwest, faintly visible as a bank of clouds, appeared the blue ridge of the Blue Mountains whose peaks were thrust into the clear upper air above the low-lying haze. The wind was westerly, and it bore to their ears a booming sound which in less experienced ears might have passed for the breaking of surf upon a shore.

"Guns!" said Pitt, who stood with Blood upon the quarter-deck. Blood nodded, raising.

"Two miles away, perhaps fifteen—somewhere off Port Royal, I should judge," Pitt added. "There he is," he said, pointing. "Does it concern you?" he asked.

"Guns off Port Royal, that should argue Colonel Bishop at work. I think it may concern us. Anyway, we'll stand in to investigate."

Cause-batted the sea with a weather, guided by the sound of cannon, for an hour, perhaps. Then, as, telescope to his eye, Blood saw the vessel, it came abruptly ceased. They held to their course, nevertheless, with all hands on deck, eagerly, anxiously scanning the sea ahead and presently an object loomed into view, which soon defined itself for a great damped plume, van der Kuylen. Read my vital, but we're come from Seyla to Charybdis."

"So?" said the other gutturally, and again, "No." Then the humor of it took him, and he yielded to it.

"Damm! What's to laugh at, you porpoise?" spluttered mureby-coat. "A fine tale that's make at home! Admiral van der Kuylen first loses his feet in the night, then his flagship first under him by a French squadron, and ends all by being captured by a pirate. I'm glad you find it matter for laughter. Since for my sins I happen to be with you, I'm damned if I do."

"There's a misapprehension, if I may make bold to point it out, put in Blood quietly. "You are not captured, gentlemen; you are rescued. When you realize it, perhaps it will recur to you to acknowledge the hospitality I am offering you. It may be poor, but it is the best at my disposal."

"To demand that you permit yourself to be treated?" he inquired. "No, I am Lord Willoughby, King William's Governor-General of the West Indies, and this is Admiral van der Kuylen, commander of His Majesty's West Indian fleet, at present maligned somewhere in this damned Caribbean Sea."

"King William," quoth Blood, "and who may be King William, or what may he be King?"

"I am alluding to His Majesty King William III—William of Orange—who, with Queen Mary, has been ruling England for two months and more."

"Dye mean, sir, that they've rescued themselves at home, and kicked out that scoundrel James and his gang of scoundrels?"

"Shill! Hadn't you heard? Where the devil have you been all this while? Briefly he gave an account. After that, with reserved assurances, that about his ship they should be honorably treated, Captain Blood took the Governor-General and the Admiral to his cabin, what time the work of rescue went on."

"Go home, if you will," said his lordship when comfortable. Here is a great chance for you, since you declare yourself a pirate. Should you choose to serve King William out here during his war, your knowledge of the West Indies should render you a very valuable asset to the British Government, which you would not find ungrateful. You should consider it. Thanne, sir, I repeat: it is a great chance you are given."

"Pitt came in to report that the work of rescue was at an end, and the men picked up—some forty-five in all—were aboard the two buccanier ships. He held that office as first at the request of your lordship's concerns in my consideration of your own. You'll be willing me to land you at Port Royal?"

"At Port Royal?" The little man squirmed uneasily on his seat. "Wretchedly ill at ease, the Admiral informed Blood that they had put into Port Royal last evening to find its harbor crowded with His Majesty's ships on some wretched case-to-Toruga after buccaniers, taking the whole of the fleet with them. He said, "Bivaro aware of this?" Blood cried sharply.

"He was the Dutch Admiral who was not?" "You'd be gone if he were not. M. de Bivaro he takes some of our men prisoners. Perhaps he'll send you a couple of them soon (tell, is a great absurdity."

Women At Wembley

Taking Greater Interest in Empire Exhibition Than Ever Before

Women are going to have more to do with this year's Wembley exhibition than they did last year. Queen Mary will pay many more visits during the summer, if her engagements permit.

Under the presidency of the Duchess of York and the vice-presidency of Princess Mary, the women's section has organized a factory, including a "National Baby Week."

The march of women into spheres of activity has been a steady one, as indicated by the intention to hold a conference of women engineers.

The majority of women, however, will be engaged in the food section, giving hints on household affairs, the selection of fruits and food, and commemorating the latest household labor saving appliances.

A Judicial Contrast

The London Advertiser publishes the last two Ontario cases and makes no comment, because comment is needless. A former Hamilton judge, who was a judge for a long time, was appointed for two years for stealing two horses, while near London a motorist was fined and fined for a similar offense and then sentenced after six months—St. Catharines Standard.

The cynical humorist observes that many a fellow takes a girl who is as sweet as sugar only to get stung.

She Said He Was "Incurable"

By Marjorie Bradford, Social Services Council of Canada

A woman brought her son into one of our Canadian juvenile courts a short time ago because, as she said, he, the boy was incurable. It would not stay in school and was getting his parents into continual difficulty.

When the boy gave his side of the story to the judge he said that school always gave him a headache.

The boy, on being examined by the court doctor, was discovered to be totally blind in one eye with the sight of the other already seriously impaired. And this poor ignorant mother thought he was "incurable."

The boy was immediately given treatment which saved and even improved the sight of his eye. If the condition had been known in time the sight of his other eye might also have been saved.

Of 3,400,000 school children in the United States, 4,000,000 are retarded in their studies. And of these 6,000,000 retarded children, 2,000,000 are retarded because of defective eyesight. It is estimated that defective eyesight among school children costs American taxpayers $10,000,000 a year.

Similar figures for Canada are not available but they are estimated to be exactly the same. This is a sad state of affairs for Canadian school children are suffering under a mental handicap because of defective eyesight. It is a wonder how many of these children have been adjudged stupid or "incurable."

Donald MacLachlan surprised his many friends in town by turning up on them suddenly last Friday morning. Donald is an old resident of the town but has been residing at Vancouver for the past few months. He will be here for a week on business. His friends were glad to see his smiling countenance again.

His many well-wishing friends in Redcliff will be glad to learn that Alex Sturman was successful in passing his grade XII examination with a sup. in trigonometry only. Considering the handicap which Alex has been studying, this showing is indeed most gratifying. Alex has been attending school in Medicine Hat and on many occasions has walked to and from school. He has also worked at odd jobs week ends and after school hours. Good boy Alex! This is another proof that you can't keep a good man down. It should be a lesson to other boys of what can be accomplished by cultivating the will to win.

You are cordially invited to attend a series of

Free Demonstrations of Baking

Silence That Is Not Golden

THE merchant who fails to "speak up" lets a lot golden sales slip past his store. This lost business goes either to his competitor down street or, by the mail order route, to the big city stores.

People are often surprised to find that the goods they bought "unsight unseen" from a catalogue can be seen and examined in the local store!
